A few months ago, I was working on a project that required some images of airplanes. The photos had to be good, and they had to be cheap. I found what I needed at a stock photo gallery from the US Air Force. The pictures were good, and they were free. I started looking for other stock photo sites put up by the government.

I found plenty.

Some sites are good, some suck. But if you are looking for free photos of military, science or American history-related themes, the government is a good place to start.

I figured that others might find these sites valuable, so I put up this site. (By the way, here are my top 10 favorites)

I have over 190 sites listed here, but I am sure that isn't all the government has. if you come across an image gallery that you think should be here, please email me. Got any suggestions for improving the site? I want to hear those too!

Disclaimer

As far as I know, photos produced by the US government are free and in the public domain. A lot of these galleries explicitly state that you can do whatever you want with their photos. But I make websites - I ain't a lawyer. So it is up to you to read the guidelines at all of the sites I link to. There may be restrictions and copyrights on some photos, so be a good citizen and read before you use anything. If you get into trouble, it's your problem, not mine.

Also, this site is not affiliated with the real US governement. It's just me.

Peace.
